TRANTOR

● Action packed arcade combat game from US Gold!

★ Thanks to US Gold, we've got our hands on the action game that rocked the Speccy graphics world a while ago! Trantor features some of the fastest and most colourful graphics on the Speccy and it's got so much action it'll keep you playing for ages!

Before you get into the game, don't miss the brilliant animation sequence at the start, or the four-channel music — it's amazing what a Speccy can do when it wants to!

Trantor, the last stormtrooper, has been abandoned on an alien planet. The only way of escape is by activating the main planetary computer held in the terminal building and beaming home. Trantor starts near the terminal building's lift, and to progress further he has to run, duck and jump his way past a load of pounding pneumatic hammers! One false move and it's Trantor — the squashed stormtrooper! Hot on his heels is an army of alien foes:

THE LAST STORMTROOPER

hover droids, robots, and green uglies which can be blasted by Trantor's lethal weapon: the flamethrower!

Don't get carried away blasting and running — searching lockers is a must (press down to activate). Inside you may find extra weapons, ammo, or supplies — essentials to keep you going!

There are eight terminals in the complex to be located and activated. Each provides a letter which is then made up into a computer-related word. It's that word you have to key into the main computer terminal. A time limit means there is no time for dawdling in any sector, but discovering a letter resets the time clock.

GAME thrills

Having assembled the word, Trantor is given a beam code. Use this in the beam area and he's wizzed off to safety, mission complete! Hurrah for Trantor, eh?

CONTROLS

Keep Trantor in the action using a joystick plugged into a Cursor, Kempston, or Sinclair interface. Alternatively get to grips with the keys which are definable.

OCEAN CONQUEROR

● Sensational submarine simulation from Hewson!

★ 'The best submarine simulation to date!' yelled the reviewers a while back when this fab underwater game was released! And now, thanks to Hewson, it's yours to play! Doing the Captain Birdseye bit with a lot of hairy sailors while travelling beneath the ocean waves may not be everyone's idea of fun — but if you're a submariner then it's all in a wet day's work!

As Captain, Rear-Admiral, Vice-Admiral, or Admiral — the choice of difficulty level is yours — your mission is to destroy four convoys, each consisting of a freighter and two destroyers. These are supplying enemy troops based on islands in the region, and should the supplies get through, you've lost the war. Destroy your enemies and return to dock within 18 hours and you're the victor.

You start in dock on a large island. The speed of the freighters is exactly half of the submarine's but the destroyers are twice as fast as you and usually put the speed on when they're coming in for the attack. However, don't start fighting in dock — as you may seriously damage it. Should the sub need urgent repair (or need to stock up on weapons), travel back to one of the two islands which contain docks where the submarine can be overhauled.

A guidance display shows the distance from the nearest dock once you're within a mile of it. Docking is absolutely perfect if the bearing of the ship is 90 degrees and the values EO and NO are seen. To begin the docking process you have to stop the sub. In the dock the time acceleration mode is automatically activated and repairing and refuelling begins.

TO SEE THE SEA

A variable magnification periscope occupies the top of the screen and allows you to view approaching freighters, destroyers, drilling rigs, lighthouses, docks, and islands. The periscope is useless when fog approaches as it's impossible to see anything! However, the radar and sonar displays provide essential information on nearby targets, and you can use the map (press M to activate) which shows the entire playing area with symbols indicating islands, drilling rigs and all that. Beside the map a table shows the coordinates of the convoys and the docks. When submerged the screen automatically shows the map.

The sub's top speed is a nip over 20 mph, so it's just as well you can travel in accelerated time (DEUS mode) rather than waiting ages for the sub to get across the oceans! However, you can't use it in battle (so make sure it's switched off before firing) and you can't flee in DEUS mode when enemy fire is heading your way.

THE DASHBOARD

A 10 mile-range radar sits in the middle of the dashboard. To help navigation when visibility is clouded this can be activated. For enhanced display press R for range which gives a radar map of five miles. The radar is also helpful for targeting. Your weapons have a range of one to one-and-a-half miles, so using the radar you can decide whether to shoot enemies or move closer.

Above the radar is a rectangular box which shows:

- Periscope angle (PA): Displays the position of the periscope in relation to the bow in degrees with an arrow showing the direction left or right.
- Bottom (BTM): Displays the distance of the sub from the sea floor
- Magnification (MAGN): Displays the magnification of the periscope
- Rudder (RDDR): The value is shown in degrees with an arrow indicating the direction. To the right is a sign which shows whether the rudder is locked or not. If this function is off the rudder will automatically centre.
- Vertical Speed Indicator (VSI): Erm, speed.
- Bearing (BRG): The direction of the sub

Diving and surfacing is regulated by ballast tanks which contain either compressed air or water, so that the sub rises or sinks. If there's insufficient air for the ballast tanks then the sub cannot elevate to the surface.

On the left of the radar is a display showing the state of the sub and weapons; the four torpedo tubes and the guided anti-missile launcher are displayed above. Under the weapons is an outline of the sub; while it is white everything is OK, but if it turns to red you've failed.

After launching a guided anti-missile you can control its movements by following the target with the periscope. Using a magnification of x2 or x3 helps your aim to be more accurate. If the GAM looks as if it'll miss the target, tilt its nose into the water so you can fire another immediately.

To the right of the radar is the navigational computer display. In the top row are the indicators of the battery (BTT), fuel, hydroplane, ballast water (BLST) and the depth meter (DPTH) (the ballast tanks and the hydroplanes are used to submerge the sub — to learn the process try every key while watching the depth meter and the VSI).

Below these are the throttle, speed and compressed air indicators. The air is used to empty the ballast tanks of the sub. If you run out of air you can't come to the surface again. Between the air meter and the speed indicator are the indicator lamps to show the amount of fuel in the tanks, condition of the batteries, which engine is being used and whether the air compressor is on.

And that's it (Phew! -Ed!)

DON'T SINK THE SUB...

Learn the controls before you dive! Dive! Dive! (Phwoeeep!). This game calls for joysticks and keyboard controls. And there are a lot of them!!

Q/A Throttle up and down. Hold up to increase speed, hold down to decrease and go into reverse

W Ballast water in

S Ballast water out

R Radar range swap

O/P Change magnification on periscope

H Hold

N Motor sound on or off

B Swaps between diesel motor and the accumulator

V Turns air compressor on (note:

the diesel motor has to be used to recharge the batteries and to operate the air compressor)
SYM SHIFT DEUS on or off
4 Controls lock of rudder
1/2 Turns the periscope by 1/6 degrees (use CAPS SHIFT as well to change by 5 degrees)
M Map on or off

JOYSTICK

up/down Controls the hydroplanes
fire Launches missile

To fire a torpedo use 9 (with cursor stick or keyboard) or 5 (Interface II or Kempston) key.

When a missile is in the air, the joystick controls its movement: up/down for missile up/down. You can turn it faster by pressing the fire key together with the left or right keys.

Happy hunting, captain!

MORON

Devious adventure game from Atlantis!

There was such a good response from last month's Adventure Trail Special that we've decided to stick an adventure game on the Powertape — and it's a cracker! Moron scored 80% when originally reviewed and, if you have the brains, you're going to love playing it!

Many years ago a race of people known as Morons stumbled across the three Pillars of Time. The captain of a Moron space ship, being a sneaky kinda Moron, stole the Pillars and hid them aboard the ship. In revenge the crew killed the captain, but forgot to question him about where he hid the Pillars of Time!

Nonetheless time has gone on and, after drifting through space, the ship is now on a collision course with Earth. This is where you come in... Find the three Pillars of Time (past, present, future) secreted about the spaceship and manoeuvre the ship away from Earth. Can you succeed, or will you just join the long line of Morons who have failed?!

To help you there are nine oxygen cylinders and nine batteries aboard the space ship. You need to maintain your life-support system, avoid setting off the intruder alarm, deal with the Morons' vicious pets and, if you find each Pillar of Time, you have to dispose of the Moron who comes to claim them in a novel and unusual way!

As well as the normal verb/noun commands (like Take Torch, Pull Lever) you can also use the following abbreviations: N (north), S (south), E (east), W (west), NE (north east) and so on for compass directions. Also you can use U (up), D (down), O (open), G (get), T (take), L (look, redescribes current location), and I (inventory, gives information on objects carried or worn).

GAME SAVE instantly saves your current position to the Speccy's memory and GAME LOAD restarts the game from the position you saved. Typing simply SAVE or LOAD saves to or loads from the tape deck. PICTURE ON and PICTURE OFF turns the graphics on and off and HELP might give you a clue, then again, it might not.

WHAT? STUCK ALREADY?!!

Stumped? Confused? Dead?!! You need instant help! We haven't got the space to reel off all the clues here, and it would give too much away. But if you need help you can phone the Moron Help Line on 0898 555 086. The clues you can hear on that number should keep you going until the complete solution is revealed next month. Just listen to the bit you're stuck on and then hang up. It's a telecommunication revelation (ie: completely ace)!!

Calls cost 33p per minute during off-peak; time and 44p per minute at all other times. If you don't pay the phone bill ask the person who does! CRASH Hotlines are brought to you by CRASH Ltd and Chatterbox Ltd.

Test your memory with a wicked puzzle from Eric Auterith!

Master Brain is another Euro-game, this time from CRASH reader Eric Auterith who lives in Austria! So, c'mon, give yourself a brain drain with the latest Powertape perplexing puzzle game!

Master Brain can be played as a one or two-player competition. It's based on the card game where a set of cards is placed face down and the players, turning over two at a time, have to find a matching pair. If a match is found those cards are removed and the player has another go. However, if the two cards are unsuccessfully matched the cards are placed face down once again and the next player goes. It's a good card game — but slap it on a Speccy and it gets even better!

Three different skill levels gives everyone the chance to be a winner — the higher the skill level the more cards are placed face down. And to really get you concentrating a Movement option can be activated. If that's switched on the cards slide around after every turn! Blee!

Four graphically different sets of cards are available to play with: Spectrum Heroes features stars of classic games (see how many you remember!), Kids features things like ice cream and choo-choo trains, Numbers features, well numbers and Colour Master is the trickiest of the lot with its two-coloured cards. Get you brain in gear and go for it!

CONTROLS

The keys for moving your pointy finger cursor over the cards are: Q/up, A/down, O/left, P/right and M/fire.

POKEMANIA!

BE A COVER STAR!

Have you written a triff and brill game? Want to share it with the Speccy universe? Well, send it to us, on tape or disk with game instructions, and our reviewers will evaluate it: if it passes their exacting standards, we'll put it on the Powertape, and you get some loot — and quite possibly fame!

WE MAKE IT SO HARD

 Datel Electronics are one of the country's leading hardware retailers. You may have seen their advertisements in CRASH or may even have bought something from them. If you are thinking of sending off for any of their products in the future WAIT! NICK ROBERTS has checked them out for you first and given marks out of five on the Nickometer!

The Music Machine £49.99

Making music on the Spectrum has never been an easy affair. The BEEP command is now seen as a joke when you look at what some computers can achieve, but for those who still want to create musical masterpieces on the Spectrum: here comes The Music Machine.

● This is a sound sampling system that allows any sound to be recorded and stored in the computer RAM. These sounds can then be replayed either in a keyboard or drum machine situation. The package comprises a plug-in unit that connects to the back of your Speccy, a software tape and a microphone for use in sampling. The unit has a level control, headphone, microphone, audio out, MIDI in, MIDI thru and MIDI out sockets.

The quality of the samples The ★ Spectrum sampling made easy with The Music Machine.

★ Jeppers, Creepers! It's the Music Machine!

Music Machine can produce is quite good when you think of the limitations of the Spectrum — sample time is very limited though. Writing music has been simplified by using the on-screen facilities. You write as you would a normal song by using notes and bars, and once written, songs can be stored on tape for future use. Making new songs can be done by selecting bars from songs and merging them together into a new composition.

For those with a MIDI instrument, you can connect it to The Music Machine and use it to trigger sampled sounds or play a mixture of the MIDI instrument sounds and The Music Machine effects. The songs and sounds you can create using this system are hardly Top Of The Pops quality but The Music Machine does provide a good starting point for the beginner.

LC200 Colour Printer

How do you spoil your Spectrum rotten? By buying it one of these super dooper colour printers with software, that's how!

● With the LC200 Centronics printer you can print out any screen that has been saved on the Spectrum using the SCREEN$ method. The printer goes down the screen line by line printing each colour in turn, gradually building up a picture. This method of printing is time consuming and printouts range from a few seconds to quarter of an hour depending on the number of then this is a really good buy.

With the accompanying software you can change the screen you want to print in a number of ways. You can swap the black and white in the picture around, turn brightness off, get rid of the black altogether and even print the screen double the normal size for extra large printouts.

The everyday Spectrum user may find having a colour printer a waste of time. The only real use I can see for it is for computer artists in displaying their work as a hard copy. Of course the printer can be used for normal letter printing as well if you have a word processing package, and a number of different fonts are available. To use it for normal printing all you need do is swap the colour ribbon for a black ink one.

With the printer package you get the printer itself, a Centronics printer interface and the software to

Parallel/Centronics Printer Interface £19.99

One of the big problems with word processing on the Spectrum is connecting the computer to the kind of printers that will give you good quality print. The +3 has a built in printer port, so all you need there is a printer lead but for the 48K/128K/+2/+2A users an interface is what's needed.

● The Parallel/Centronics Printer Interface comes as a plug-in unit, connecting to the back of the computer. The lead included in the package connects to any of the top parallel printers. All you do is load in the software and you're away!

So, what exactly can you print from your Spectrum to the printer? You can use any of the top word processing packages (Tasword, Devpac, etc) to create your documents and then, using the print option, send the information to your printer. You can also print out hi-resolution screen dumps to a dot-matrix printer. For people who want to use their Spectrum as a word, erm word, processor this interface is an essential purchase.

NICKOMETER: ★ ★ ★

Ramprint with Ramwrite £34.99

The Ramprint is basically the same item as the Parallel/Centronics Printer Interface but with one important difference. It has a built in word processor that can be instantly accessed from BASIC.

● The Ramwrite software is not the best word processor I've ever used but it does the job and doesn't cost you anything extra once you've bought the interface. It works without using up any of the computer's memory, leaving it all free for the storage of files. If the thought of having to read through an encyclopedia of instructions before you can start using your new toy is a little daunting for you, then fret no more. Ramwrite is controlled using simple, uncomplex commands. The only thing you really need to worry about is how to write!

Ramprint also includes a Kempston compatible joystick port so you can blast your favourite games in style. A perfect solution to your word processing blues.

★ The mouse with all its accessories, but where's the cheese?

Genius Mouse £49.99

For all you budding Leonardos or Oli Freys comes the best graphics package imaginable for the Spectrum. The OCP Art Studio has been around for ages but the whole system is enhanced by the Genius Mouse.

● Mice are used on 16-bit computers as standard equipment but with 8-bit machines there's been no such luxury — until now. In the Genius Mouse pack you get everything you could possibly want when using a mouse (no! don't mean a cage and a little wheel for it to run around!); you get the mouse in a neat storage box, a mouse holder to keep it in, a rubber mouse mat, and the Art Studio software.

I had only ever used Art Studio on the keyboard, so using the mouse gave the program a whole new dimension. You can now accurately draw freehand instead of struggling with fingers everywhere. The mouse has two buttons on the top. On an Amiga or Atari ST they do different things, but the Genius Mouse buttons both have the same effect, similar to pressing fire on the joystick. And if you have a joystick then the interface that connects the mouse to the computer has an extra bonus for you, a Kempston compatible joystick port.

Any serious graphics artist on the Spectrum should not be without a Genius Mouse, it's an essential piece of kit!

PREVIEWS

LET'S FIGHT!

★ Gauntlet, the classic multi-player arcade game, is coming back with a vengeance and a new angle in US Gold's spring line-up of power packed games. Take the ghoulie-infested dungeons, add a whole extra world beyond those dungeons, plunk in an arcade adventure element, turn the old 2D overhead view into isometric 3D and you've got a sniff of what Gauntlet 3 — The Final Quest is going to be like! RICHARD EDDY went ghost bashing.

● Cor! I remember Gauntlet — it was ace! It was one of the first big-name arcade licences and gave US Gold a red-hot number one for Christmas 1986. The arcade game is a classic piece of machinery: it has a huge cabinet with a control deck that spreads out like a table. Mind you, it does have to accommodate up to four simultaneous players! Each player takes control of a mystical hero — you could chose to play Thor the warrior, Thyra the valkyrie, Questor the elf or Merlin the wizard and each character has their own special powers. I remember there was always a huge argument about who played which character — everyone belted across the arcade to grab control of Thyra or Thor but no-one ever wanted Questor. Although a speedy chap, he was a bit of a short ass and didn't really fit the hero image. But then, as they say, you should always look after your 'elf! Haw! Haw!

Five years on and the big G is back in its third incarnation (Gauntlet 2 was just more of the same, really) and this is going to be big! Programming company Software Creations is the creative force behind the game which US Gold hope to publish in March. Gauntlet 3 is a completely original game, designed especially for home computers. So, don't rush down to your local coin-op

★ A gloomy castle is one of the smaller interior locations, but there are still loads of enemies to watch out for.

★ Oooo! Well I never! The hut leads into a whole new set of locations, the first being this red cavern emporium for a game, 'cos it ain't there!

Joining Questor, Thyra, Thor and Merlin are four new heroes ready to chuck down the gauntlet to fight the forces of evil: Lizardman, Iceman, Rockman and King Neptune. Like the original Speccy version of Gauntlet you can play on your own or rope in a mate to help, each taking control of your chosen character. All are equipped with their own suitable weapon (Thor has his axe, Questor has a bow and arrow, Neptune has a trident and so on...) and they're going to need them! The eight-way scrolling scenery is packed with opponents. Some you'll recognise from Gauntlet, like the ghosts, lobbers, grunts and Death, but Software Creations has dreamed up a few new creepies to haunt you: programmer Dean Belfield isn't saying what they are yet. The range of opponents vary in their toughness. Some can be killed with a single shot, some need a few more and with Death the best plan is just to leg it! Ghoulies come to life from blocks on the ground — as long as the block is still there the ghoulies keep coming. However, if you can get close enough, the block can be destroyed preventing any further creepies from emerging.

★ Seven ghosts chase Thyra in the graveyard — could that hut provide a hiding place?

Magic potions, as in the original game, are there to help. Just as the enemies, some potions are taken from Gauntlet, like the smartbomb and the invisibility magic spells but new ones will be added. Again, Dean isn't revealing anything (he probably hasn't dreamed them up!) —Ed).

INNOVATION

So, what about the main point of innovation in Gauntlet 3 — the 3D? Quite honestly, it's completely brilliant! The scenery graphics are incredibly detailed and there are plenty of them. Surprisingly, when the enemies attack in force, which can be up to about ten or 12 on-screen at one time, the animation is very speedy! Dean Belfield reckons the eight-way scrolling routine, created specially for Gauntlet 3 is the fastest and most efficient ever seen on the Speccy. Though there's a hefty price to be paid for such a speedy routine: it eats memory! Dean says because of this, fitting the actual game in was a nightmare, especially as he's expected to produce a 48K version as well!

Eight new lands form Gauntlet 3's magical world and the playing area on each is massive. Not only are there the main eight landscapes but within each are four or five smaller interior locations to explore. Your adventure begins in the forest (level one) which leads into the mountains (level 2) and through into the swamp (level three). Level four is set in the burning heat of the volcano and you can cool down in level five in the Sea Kingdom. The Lost City and the Ice Kingdom make levels six and seven and the ultimate challenge lies in the devilish Magic Kingdom level.

Progressing from level to level becomes more difficult as you go — the attackers don't just become more vicious but the puzzles become more tricky. Puzzles? Oh yeah: whereas in Gauntlet it was simply (!) a matter of killing everything and picking up a few keys to escape from a level, to leave a level in Gauntlet 3 a task has to be completed. This puzzle element makes for a more involved adventure game than the old arcade style of action. For example, in level three's swamp lands your task is to collect and use the necessary objects to build a bridge across the treacherous areas of the swamp. Fail and your hero could get that sinking feeling!

Gauntlet 3 is certainly going to be a huge hit when it's released — it's got all the hallmarks of a winner and there are still, at the time of writing, another four months of development to go! It already looks like it's going to be the best arcade adventuring yet seen on the Speccy. Roll on March...

Smashing onto your Speccy screens soon! A couple of early tasters to whet your appetite!!

STILL GOING

● THE NEVERENDING STORY 2

It's okay folks! You can breathe a sigh of relief — The Neverending Story 2: The Arcade Game is on its way but Limahl and his croonful 'songs' are nowhere to be seen! Hurrah! The game, due to hit the shelves any time now, comes from Swiss publisher Linel and is based on the recent film. Linel say the game will feature all the main sequences from the movie with detailed graphics and action packed gameplay!

Played in an arcade adventure style, the action is set in the appropriately named fantasy land of Fantasia. The land is under threat from evil sorceress Xaide, and you as plucky Bastian Bux are transported into the kingdom via the story book to save it from the dark forces.

The game begins at the Silver City where an army of giants give chase. Escape from them and the killing of a fire-spitting dragon is your next objective. Bastian and side-kick Falkor chase the Dragon through Fantasia's valleys until they reach the battle ground of Horok Castle. A mighty battle with the evil sorceress and her minions, plus many other scenes are lined up for The Neverending Story 2 and Linel reckon, using the player's skill and imagination there are loads of different ways to end the story in this game! Check it out in the review next month.

ULTIMATE RIDE

● 750cc GRAND PRIX

CodeMasters' latest sporting simulation is a ride on the highway on a wild 750cc motorbike! Programmer Lyndon Sharp, of skillo development team W.A.S.P. (We Are Spectrum Programmers), got the idea after riding pillion on CodeMasters' spokesman Mike Clarke's mega motorbike! Mike reckons 750cc Grand Prix is quite spooky in its realism.

The racing takes place over six different classic British tracks including Silverstone, Thruxton and Brands Hatch and you're racing against up to seven other professional riders! The 750cc bike features automatic gears and as you increase the throttle the scrolling scenery whizzes past at an alarming rate — just watch out for the objects on the track! The 128K version of 750cc Grand Prix promises to have presentation of the snootiest order with realistic sound fx, loads of music and even a bit of speech! Out at any time now, 750cc Grand Prix is a snip at £2.99!

● The Monaco Grand Prix is a bit of an event on the Formula One racing calendar, but would you know how to get there? Oi! Nicko — do you know where Monaco is? 'Erm... it's, it's... er, down south somewhere.' Not very good. Caswell, d'you know? 'Monaco, Monaco... (after several billion years) ah — is it in the Mediterranean somewhere?' Hmmm, getting warm. How about about Big Jude in the Ad dept 'Is it between France and Italy — what kind of question is that to ask me first thing in the morning?!' They're all completely useless. Monaco is a republic on the French Riviera and what a swank location it is!

US Gold are whizzing you off there in March for a taste of racing action with their Super Monaco GP game. Actually, you may have already been there: the game is converted from the smashing Sega coin-op of the same name that's been in the arcades for about a year.

US Gold have handed the conversion work to development company Probe Software, and in charge of the project is a rather bouncy producer called Neil Young. Work began in September: so how's it going, Neil? 'Oooooo nooooo! It's a tough job! Really tough. The arcade machine runs amazingly fast and features tons of graphics which whizz past at 50 frames per second! The poor Speccy can't handle that! Oh dear. What are you going to do?' The aim is to capture the feel of the arcade machine. Y'see the coin-op relies heavily on speed, huge amounts of graphics and the fun of the pneumatic sit-down version. When it comes down to it, the actual gameplay of the coin-op isn't that hot. We're going to improve the gameplay to make it a tougher, more playable game. The end result will have the same sort of feel as Super Hang On (excellent motorbike racing game), with that standard of animation but more speedy.

'Playability is the most important thing. If we put all our efforts into producing the many fast large graphics of the coin-op there wouldn't be much of a game there.'

WHAT'S THE GAME LIKE?

Though not an exact replica of the Monaco track, the one-track course is a hellish one. It's full of twists, turns, hills, valleys and tunnels; so it's not simply about putting your foot down and roaring off at the possible top speed of 360 kph. Success relies on you knowing the course and knowing the best way to handle your Formula One car.

Before the race begins, one of three difficulty levels is selected: Beginner is the easiest level and the car features an automatic gear box. Amateur is the middle setting and lets you get to grips with a four-speed gear box — and for the real racers the Professional skill level gives you seven gears to play with!

With Monaco's variable weather conditions, the style of race is dramatically differing. The track can be set to dry condition or wet condition — in the wet you need to keep far more control of the car to prevent it careering into the scenery! Like most race games, before you enter the championship a qualifying round is played to determine your grid position. Then in the race, if your grid starting position is tenth you can't afford to finish the championship run in a lower position. Do that and it's Game Over.

Super Monaco GP is a world-class competition and as such you're up against 19 — 19!! — other skillful drivers. All 19 are programmed with individual characteristics and driving patterns. You may learn that car nine is a complete nutter swerving all over the road or that car 14's tactic is to continually block your progress as you reach pole position. Other cars can be rammed off the road if you're feeling particularly mean. Though bumping is more likely to knock your speed down, leaving you trailing behind the others.

Even experienced drivers can have bad days and the best way to gauge your performance is by checking your Driver Point score. Race like a pro and you could earn up to 99 points but, when you first start playing, you'll probably be itching to get up to that magic 50!

■ Roar off up the straights — increase speed while you can, corners can't be far off!

A lot of fun is bound to be had with Super Monaco GP, but with just the one track will the game have lastability? Well, heck yes! For a start it's a game of skill, not simply speed and, at this very moment, secret talks are going on to give the go-ahead for extra track packs. Released separately, the packs will contain extra bits of code for you to load into Super Monaco GP; you'll be instantly transported to another racing venue but with all the thrill of a Super Monaco race! 'Blooming fab!' as they say in that small republic on the French Riviera.

■ The gear box selection screen — how much of a pro are you?

PROGRAMMER'S PITSTOP

Neil's the producer, but who is actually doing the hard work? (Oii — Neil). Main code is being written by David Shea who's recent history lies in Golden Axe, another game developed by Probe. On the arty side is graphics artist Nick Cook who did the graphics for Super Hang On and he's also working on Back to the Future Part 3 for Mirrorsoft. Music comes from a company called Sound Images and there are six pieces of music for the 128K version. The 48K version will have a bit of noise coming out from the bleeper. The 128K version will be more flashy than the 48K version. With the 128K game you get all the skillo presentation of the coin-op and with a 48K you don't. Aww.

THE PAGE WITH ALL THINGS COUPE!

Checking out the latest and greatest offerings for the SAM Coupé it's our roving reporter, NICK ROBERTS. What have you got for us this month Nicko?

SAM FLEXES HIS MUSCLES

A new piece of software converted and enhanced from the Spectrum is Flexipage, a viewdata/screen design program for use in business, educational or home situations. Instead of buying expensive software all the time you can write your own, simply and effectively.

The package runs along the lines of the Teletext services Oracle and Ceefax. You design screens and can link them together in a continuous loop or put in questions for the user to answer. Flexipage is already used by police forces for teaching crime prevention. The great thing about the programs that come in the package are that you don't have to be a computer genius to use them. A quick read of the instruction manual and you're well away.

The screens you can create with this system are limited in graphic quality: in Teletext tradition they usually end up looking blocky and unattractive. To get round this problem you can display any SAM screen using Flexipage, so artistic masterpieces are not beyond its capabilities.

Whatever kind of business you're in, if you need to display information in an interesting and simple way then Flexipage is for you. Obtain an order form from: Flexibase Software, 20 The Parklands, Droitwich Spa, Worcs. WR9 7DG.

MOVIE MADNESS

Fans of RoboCop and Total Recall may like to know that they can get digitized video trailer demos of them for their SAM Coupé! RoboCop and Total Recall were both big earners and have been SAM converted in true 'grainy' style. The Robodemo has a total of 112 animation screens split into three scenes: The Fall of ED 209, Arrest Made and News Report. Fans of the film are able to relive their favourite scenes (filling in the sound effects themselves) and see such characters as ED 209, RoboCop, a reporter and the bloke with the beard in the shop doing their stuff. This is no ordinary animated demo though, this one is smart! It'll sense whether you're using a 256K or 512K machine and make the appropriate changes to the program. As an extra little gimmick the programmer has included sampled speech from the film in the Star Wars demo and a special Christmas Quiz! Both for only £1.50.

Create your own sprites easily using SAM Supplement.

Good 'ol Mr SAM can even cope with parallax scrolling, so make some games software houses!

final scene. It's not exactly CD quality but you can just about hear Robo if you have the volume at just the right level. All this for only £1.50!

The Total Recall demo comes in two forms. You can get the executive version for £2.50 and the normal version (which runs on a 256K machine) for £1.50. The differences between the two are the quality and number of frames used in the animation. There are 72 frames in mode 4 on the 512K demo and 81 on the 256K. 'Hold on a minute that's more!' I hear you cry. Yes, but the 256K one loads in four blocks and is done in a lower mode.

These animated film demos are available from many PD libraries or direct from the programmer: G. Middleton, 35 Victoria Mount, Horsforth, Leeds, LS18 4PU. By the time this is printed two new demos will also be available. A digitised "Your move creep!", a groovy RoboCop demo.

PD UPDATE

For those of you who may be in the dark when it comes to SAM Public Domain here is a little reminder about a couple of new disks to arrive on my desk.

Fred disks five and six have been released in the last few months and are as action packed as ever. Disk six includes previews of some of the latest SAM software: demos of grabbing graphics and a section on machine code. Disk five has parallax scrolling demos and a couple of new delights from Zenith Graphics: a Coyote and World In His Eyes (very DM) demo. Of course all the usual reviews and editorial are there too.

Fred is available from: Colin MacDonald, 40 Roundhill, Manifieth, Dundee, DD5 3RZ.

SDC Sam Supplement has a new disk out as well. More for those interested in programming with their Coupé, this disk has useful programs like a sprite designer, disk copier and a special program to help those unfamiliar with the animation side of Flash! the free SAM graphics package.

The 'supplement', as those in the know like to call it, is available from: B.D. Mumford, 57 St Saviours Road, West Croydon, Surrey, CR0 2XE.

More SAM news next month — in the mean time let that Coupé rip!

LIVE CIRCUIT

Good grief! February already! Well, it is in real time. But, in Lloyd Mangram time, it's a freezing cold morning in December and I can't concentrate because there are a load of workmen digging up the road just outside with pneumatic hammers (dugga-dugga-dugga — 'Time for a tea break, eh lads?' — dugga-dugga-dugga)! Bit of a smaller mail sack this month, you were probably all too busy writing to Santa or filling in last issue's Crashtionnaire. Thanks to all ten billion of you who sent in replies, you've made the girls in administration very happy ('hem, 'hem)! On with the show. This month's letter of the month, and £40's worth of software, winner is Andy Longbottom from Hastings...

MONEY'S WORTH

Dear Lloyd
Over the last couple of months more and more people have been complaining about the price of Spectrum games. I am sick of the whole subject. Why don't these people sit down and think what they're getting when they pay £9.99 for a game?

The finished game results from a lot of hard work. Not just by one person. There are all the jobs of coding, game design, graphics, music and fx, design and artwork and production.

Take £9.99 in 10ps and see how long it lasts on an arcade game — the only thing you're left with after playing a coin-op is a stiff arm and no more game.

Then there's the pleasure of waiting three to five or more minutes for a game to load — why can't they make it less boring?

If people want to winge about prices why don't you winge at the retailers like WH Smith, Woolworth and other computer shops? Well, now I've got that off my chest there's only one other thing to say — best wishes to all at CRASH for 1991!
Andy Longbottom, Hastings, East Sussex

Another good way of judging whether a game is worth its dosh is reckoning that £1 an hour is a fair price for entertainment. So, if you buy a £9.99 game and you enjoy it for ten hours you've had you money's worth! In fact, after ten hours you'll have made 1p profit! Hey! Just think: if a game is absolutely superb and you play it for weeks you're, effectivly, making a fortune!! And you've won Letter of the Month for having a bit of sense!
LM

BORED

Dear Lloyd
I'm writing this letter because I'm bored! Bored of playing the latest software. It's not worth buying! Full-price games when you can get more entertainment from a £2.99 game.

OUR HEAD IS WEDGED IN THE BODY OF A NONDA BUDGEE'S TRIDGEE AN HE CAN'T GET OUT AN HE GOIN' GET CLOBBERED BY THE OTHER TWO TRIDGEES, YOU BETCHA!

BYAH! THOSE TWO LITTLE BUBBLES IN MY TUNIC... CAN THEY BE... YES! IT'S THE EYES OF OKTUP WHICH CAN SEE INTO THE FUTURE OR BLAST THINGS AHEAD... IF ONLY I CAN GET TO THEM... BYAH!

WHY LOOKT THE LOONY WRIGGLE. DID ANYONE BOTHER TO GUARANTINE THIS DUDE. 'COS IT LOOKS LIKE IT GOT BNAHS!

HAH!

HOW!

NOW I HAVE THE DEADLY EYE OF OKTUP WHICH CAN BURN AND SCORCH AT WILL... PREPARE TO DIE, BUDGEE...

TAKE THAT...

RACING FROM REDCAR
2:30	6:12
1. BLUE GUN	6:12
2. ROCCOLO	12:1
3. GOFER	8:1

HO BOY! AM I IMPRESSED! AM I TREMBLIN' OR WHAT? FOR A MOMENT THERE I THOUGHT I WAS GOIN' GET TRAMPLED! WO THE HELL IS REDCAR ANYHO?

HEY LOOKT! ISNT THAT THE OTHER EYE OF OKTUP? WHAT WE GONNA BET THIS TIME, LAUREL AN' HARDY? CHRF!

ROAAR

PITY THE BUMBLY TRIDGEE IS TOO BROSS TO NOCK THE DANKY SHIP CONTROLS...

AN' NOW I'M IN COMPLETE CHARGE OF THE SHIP WITH AN UNLIMITED AMOUNT OF FUEL AN' RATIONS...

AN' IT'LL SOON BE POTTY TIME... WO!

Look at Target: Renegade (now rereleased on budget) and compare its graphics to Dragon Breed (£9.99): you'll see that TR's graphics turn out tops. So, if you have smaller sprites the game will be better and actually worth its price.

My buddy has a rubber keyboard Specky and listening to music on it is almost as bad as an hour of Des O'Connor records (almost!). Sometimes you do get some good sounds out of the 48K, such as Chronos and Agent X but this is getting rarer. Maybe the 48K does not have enough memory to perform good music but it's not that bad, is it?

Another thing that really gets me peeved is the colour. We do have attribute problems but I don't mind. However, one person in my class says 'The Spectrum's only got three colours: yellow, blue and white... oh, and black.' I'm sure someone shares my views and gets similar hassles from school, so could we have more colour in games?
D Adams, Birmingham

Your theory about any game with smaller sprites is better than one with big sprites is a bit heavy! Look at Navy SEALS, reviewed last month, that had huge sprites but they were superbly animated and moved very well — and it was a CRASH Smash! The same for RoboCop 2: the detailed graphics made the game a winner! However, your comment on 48K music is quite right — very very few programs bother with a decent 48K tune these days, programmers preferring to concentrate on the more powerful 128K side. For a really good blast of 48K music check out Trantor, it's excellent!

BIG CON

Dear Lloyd
My mother is dying of a tropical unknown disease caught from an infected packet of Tropical Opal Fruits and it is her last request before she dies to go behind the scenes of CRASH and receive a measly $100 of software. Robert and Chris, Walsall, West Midlands
P.S. Because of this illness she not only has a split personality but she is a split person too — she is now two boys called Robert and Chris.
P.P.S. She, or rather they, will be ready for the tour at any time. P.P.P.S. Got to get the straight jackets — they're coming to take us back to our cells!

Ha! What a useless attempt at scrounging software. Be off with you! Any decent attempts are far more welcome...
LM

JOYSTICK TIP

Dear Lloyd
I've discovered that you can use a joystick on the game Liberator: Mango Jones 2, from CRASH Issue 82. Select the redefine option and you can select left by pushing the joystick left and you can do right, up, down and fire in the same way. I tried this and it worked successfully! Honest truthful injun.
Louise (Smurf) Dunthorne, Norwich, Norfolk

Smarty! Yep, it's a useful tip for anyone who doesn't already know it, and this method works on most games with a define keys option.
LM

POOR NICKO!!

Dear Lloyd
In the Bug Box cartoons every month the jokes are always taking the mickey out of DJ Nicko. Why does everyone keep picking him? I think you should stop or else he may be offended. Doesn't he get upset?
James Westerly, Taunton

The poor chap does come in for a lot of stick in the Bug Box cartoons, but he takes it like a man (ie: he goes off and blubs in the loo!). No, seriously, he thinks they're quite funny — it's when we start punching him that he gets upset!
LM

CHEAP LEARNING

Dear Lloyd
I think there should be more educational games for children, to help with school work. It would help us if they were at a budget price so anyone can buy them when they have £2.99 to spare. I think these sort of games would really help education.

Gerard Fullerton, Bishbriggs, Glasgow

Well, Gerard, don't miss this month's Back 2 Skool feature which reviews some of the best educational games around at the moment. However, they're all pretty pricey so you'll just have to keep saving your dosh — or maybe your school or club would consider purchasing one for people to use? Why not have a go and ask?
LM

TNT TROUBLES

Dear Lloyd
I've just bought the Tengen TNT compilation. Although I don't understand what is meant when it says 'For 48K owners reset cassette recorder to 000 and read on screen prompts then rewind tape to 000 when it finishes loading' on APB. Please could you give me a simplified explanation of what I'm supposed to do computer game lark! The instructions on APB refer to the tape counter on your tape deck — maybe you don't have one? Because APB is a multi-load it's useful to keep a record of the position on the tape where each level's loading sequence begins (like the start of the tape is 000, but the beginning of level two's loading sequence may be at 203). Keep a detailed record of each load's position and you can save time by just forwarding or rewinding the tape to the right position. Okay?

Right that's it for this issue! Keep your letters coming to me at NEWSFIELD, LM'S FORUM, CRASH, LUDLOW, SHROPSHIRE SY8 1JW. Remember there could be £40 in it for you!

■ Chortle! A big g'day from Dave Fraers from Rowrah in Cumbria who has just scooped himself a £10 software voucher for Operation Roll!

■ If you reckon your artistic talents could win you a tanner, stick your cartoon in the post to: NEWSFIELD, BUG BOX, LUDLOW, SHROPSHIRE SY8 1JW.

HELP!!

Need some help!? Or can you offer some help!? This is the spot to sort your problems out. This month there's a plea for help! from Matthew Cundill of Swansea. What's up, Matt? 'I've purchased a Prism VTX 5000 modem but I have not got the manual. At first I wasn't bothered. But now I don't know how to work the modes and the built-in program so I cannot log onto Prestel or any bulletin boards. Please help me! Okay — does anyone have a spare Prism VTX 5000 manual? If you have send it to CRASH and we'll pass it onto Matthew.

CHEETAH'S HANDY CHUM IS HERE!

● In a bid to see off the Japanese and American console giants, long-time British peripheral suppliers Cheetah have launched their own hand-held console called the Gamate. Developed in the Far East by the Bit Corporation, the Gamate faces stiff opposition from Atari's colour Lynx and head-to-head competition with the mighty Nintendo's GameBoy. The Gamate's advantage is its retail price of £59.99. This makes it a tanner cheaper than the GameBoy and £70 cheaper than the Lynx.

Like the GameBoy, which has already established a following since its October launch, the Gamate is a very compact machine and features a green screen (52mm x 50mm) which displays LCD graphics in four shades of grey. Cheetah have also launched a series of seven games cartridges which rely on classic styles of gameplay and retail at £14.99 a piece. Witty Apee, the cartridge supplied in the Gamate pack, is a variation on the Digger games of old. Other games available include: Galaxy Invaders (a reasonable Galaxians clone), Money Maze (a horizontally-scrolling Pacman game) and Mini Golf (crazy golf viewed from overhead).

The Gamate itself features a four-way directional rocker switch, two action buttons, a start button, a select button, an adjustable contrast dial, an adjustable volume dial (yes, it actually plays music!), a networking cable socket (so you can link a couple of Gamates together), an earphone socket (a pair of stereo earphones are supplied) and a six volt socket (so you can run Gamate off the mains, through a transformer). Four AA-size batteries sit in the back and should provide 15 hours of gameplay.

Though the hardware is good, it's a pity the initial range of software doesn't offer anything new. The games are of average quality and reminded everyone who played them of the Speccy games of 1984. Though there has been a frantic battle for the high-score on Galaxy Invaders in the office! Cheetah promise that the second batch of games, a further 12 titles should be available soon, will offer more originality and quality. If the Gamate makes it into your high-street shops have a go — it's well worth trying out!

GREMLIN'S HERO QUEST

● Last year's top-selling adventure board game Hero Quest is being brought to life on the Speccy at Easter by Gremlin Graphics. Hero Quest is an absorbing fantasy adventure game where elves, wizards, barbarians and dwarves do battle with dark forces in search of hidden treasure. Doesn't it sound exciting? Gremlin sent CRASH a copy of the board game to play with and it looks like a lot of fun — when it's been set up! Y'see, the big box contains about three billion playing pieces (all the characters, the scenery and objects) which you have to assemble and place on the board before play. We built a set-up, which took about an hour, and then decided not to actually play the

+HI-FIRE!+

Gotta high score? We want to know about it! This is Hi-Fire where you can announce your high score to the Speccy universe! Every month we'll be pulling a name from the Hi-Fire hat each month and awarding the lucky scorer $40 worth of software!! So, play mean and get yourself a high score and send it, with a photo of yourself if possible, to: NEWSFIELD: HI-FIRE, CRASH, LUDLOW, SHROPSHIRE SY8 1JW!!

NOT ANOTHER ONE!!

● Ooooo dear! Where are we to put 'em all?! Yet another person has been dragged from sanity and brought into the CRASH office. Justine Pritchard from over Birmingham way (I'm not a Brummy, I'm a Yam Yam! —Justine) joins the ad dept this month to help out last month's new boy Kevin Gallagher (whose photo got missed out from the news last issue). Should you brave, manly Speccy gamers be putting pen to paper and dashing out a couple of love sonnets? Check out Justine's personal file and find out!!

■ At weekends, CRASH parties permitting, Justine transforms into the hostess with the mostess when she works in a Birmingham pub! She's now known as the Bet Lynch of CRASH due to the immense size of her... erm, dangly earrings!!

■ Justine's doing her bit for perestroika and helping the Russian economy. If you search deep enough in her handbag there's a bottle of vodka lurking somewhere!! (Lies, lies, lies!!! —Justine)

■ Justine's a bit of a beach baby and would love to live, during the winter months, on the sun-soaked shores of Gran Canaria. Sadly, she keeps getting sent back by the authorities because she thinks the parasols on the table are to decorate her rather large drink!!

■ Rumour has it that Justine drives an XR2. However, latest reports indicate that she's is to driving what cows are to synchronised swimming.

● The shops are full of beat-'em-ups, shoot-'em-ups and the rest: other than teaching all you monstrous little horrors that a Kalashnikov AK47 does more damage than a 9mm Beretta automatic, they're useless as educational tools. But fear not because educational software is available from many sources, and to prove it MARK CASWELL now presents a small sample of what's out now and what's on the way. Pay attention at the back!

FUN SCHOOL 3 (Under 5s)
■ FUN SCHOOL 3 (5-7s)
 DataBase ■ £9.99 ■ £14.99

● There are six games in the Under Fives pack, and despite the title's implication they're great fun for all ages. Counting has you helping Teddy climb the steps to reach his honeypot. This is achieved by counting the amount of objects on screen. A prompt appears asking how many objects there are and a correct answer moves Teddy a step nearer the honey. In level one Teddy only has a couple of steps to climb, but as you play each honeypot is harder to reach because there are more objects to spot.

In Matching it's Teddy's friend that needs the help. He's more interested in climbing a tree to deposit money in his piggy bank, than anything to do with honey. This is done by matching shapes with their partner. If you're right teddy's friend climbs the tree and drops a penny into his piggy bank.

Actions is all about Teddy doing things. Along the bottom of the screen are words that make Teddy do different things. As the game goes on you're asked to identify what Teddy is doing: answer correctly and part of Teddy's new house will be built. In Gallery Teddy has been very naughty and swapped the labels on the pictures. The task is to move the right label to the right picture.

Teddy and his friends are at the fair in Letters: they all want an ice cream but first Teddy has to ring the big bell. A letter of the alphabet appears on the screen and it's your task to match the letters and earn your friends an ice cream. Painting turns you into a budding artist with the chance to paint green skies, purple grass and yellow cows (sounds just like our art editor).

The Five to Sevens package also contains six games. In Journey Freddie Frog has to be guided to a destination set by the computer. In Collect Freddie Frog has to tidy up his pond. Lots of numbers and symbols clutter up his beloved lily pads. It's up to you to guide him around and collect them up so that they form sums. A visit to the Toyshop is next: first you need to match the words to the toys and then buy them with the money provided. Electricity tests your knowledge of conductors, insulators and the like. You're presented with a circuit and asked whether a connection has been made. Funtext is a game that involves searching for information using a Ceefax style list of information which can be called up using page numbers.

LEARNING WITH MICKEY

● Disney Software are releasing three educational games, all suitable for very young children. In Mickey's Runaway Zoo Goofy has accidentally left the gates open at Mickey's Petting Zoo. Mickey and Goofy must go and find the animals, and with four neighbourhoods to search the hunt may be a long one. In Goofy's Railway Express Goofy along with his friends Mickey, Donald, Daisy, Uncle Scrooge and Pluto journey across the countryside in Goofy's train learning about shapes and colours in the world around them. In Donald's Alphabet Chase alphabet pets are loose in Duckburg. Donald now needs your help to round up the pets from the six areas of his house: each area encourages children to learn and understand different groups of letters. Watch out for Mickey and all his friends very soon.

Time is the final game, with you being asked to study a clock face and then using the words and numbers at the bottom of the screen to tell the time.

Both Fun School packages are great fun and serve as excellent teaching aids. I wish they'd been around when I was a nipper! Even if the parents or teachers aren't computer aces, the programs are easily mastered and very well explained for the kids. I'd recommend the Fun School range of games to anyone: as it says on the packaging — Give your child an unfair advantage.

ADVENTURE
PLAYGROUND ■ CASTLE
OF DREAMS
Storm ■ £9.99

● Adventure Playground is aimed at children five years old and consists of two games: Crooked Adventure and The Queen Of Hearts. In Crooked Adventure the aim is to guide the crooked man and his crooked cat and mouse home to his crooked house.

There are four sub-games and in the first you must find the crooked stile. So, after a direction has been chosen, a simple match-the-shapes puzzle is displayed. If you guess correctly the old man is given a quick glimpse of the stile. Game two is to find the crooked sixpence.

Here you have to match up two like-coloured trees as a cursor moves over them. In game three you have to guide the cat to the mouse, but you can only move after a sequence puzzle has been solved.

The fourth and final game sees the man, cat and mouse searching for the crooked house, can you find it?

The Queen Of Hearts is a graphic adventure game where the Knave Of Hearts has stolen the Queen's tarts and hidden them. You travel through the kingdom and search for them, and on the way you meet nursery rhyme characters who either help or hinder you. There are plenty of objects to help your search.

Both games are great fun to play. Crooked Man helps to develop logical, planning and decision making skills, while Queen Of Hearts, with its text based approach, helps children with their reading. This is another recommended purchase.

Castle Of Dreams is aimed at the over nines. It's a brain teasing exploration game where you must defeat the evil Klingsor before he destroys the world. His power is contained in a chest which needs to be removed from his castle and destroyed, and there are plenty of puzzles to be solved along the way.

Some of them are logical puzzles to tax the old grey cells, whilst others are physical challenges that need objects to overcome them. Of course Klingsor isn't going to let you through without a fight but you're prepared for him. I'm not usually fond of adventures, but Castle Of Dreams kept me amused for a long while. My pet hate with this game type is map drawing but the helpful people at Storm have provided a map of your route in the package. Text descriptions are fairly detailed, which they need to be in this game type, and the challenges are tough enough to keep adventure buffs playing until Klingsor's demise.

ARCADE ACTION!

★ Give your Speccy a rest — check out the action at your local arcades! Who knows, before long you could be playing these very games at home if the conversion rights are snapped up! MARK CASWELL grabbed a bag of 10ps and played the hottest slots around!

SMASH TV Williams

● It's showtime! The year is 1999 and the most popular and most violent gameshow on the box is Smash TV. Smash TV is the latest in a long line of Williams coin-op hits. You take the part of a contestant, playing for cash, cars, family holidays and more. There's a catch though, you have to live long enough to collect them! Yeeek!

At the beginning you're armed with a puny gun and with that you must wander through the different parts of the TV studio blasting all who attack and collect the extra weapons and prizes. This is easier said than done, because attackers come at you from all sides!

The Robotron-style control system helps — each player has two control sticks. One to control movement in all compass directions and the other to fire the current weapon. When all attackers in one part of the studio have been disposed of you move onto the next. In the first few battle zones the attackers are baseball bat-wielding thugs who are easy to kill, but these soon give way to droids, mutants and creatures that defy description and make survival very tough.

An end of level guardian has to be destroyed before each contestant's prize bonus is totted up. Then you progress onto the next round.

Smash TV is one of the best coin-ops EVER! It's fast, addictive and, above all, violent. Graphic detail is excellent, all character sprites are smooth scrolling, and when an attacker is killed limbs fly in all directions. Sonics are also impressive especially the grinning MC who pops up with such catchphrase gems as 'I'll buy that for a dollar' and 'It's showtime!'. Definitely the Corky coin-op of the month, if not the whole year!

G-LOC Sega

● G-LOC is Sega's latest flying sim and has met with a mixed reaction. I still prefer Afterburner, but G-LOC runs a very close second with its slick graphics and, dare I say it, soundtrack to rival Afterburner's. Unlike its illustrious predecessor the game view is from the pilot's seat, looking out of the cockpit. There are three difficulty levels: easy where the enemy rarely hit you, medium where the shots are a bit more accurate and hard where you need to keep one hand on the eject handle!

Even ace Afterburner players like myself will find it hard to survive for very long on the hard-level, so in true macho style I wimped out and went for the easy peasy option.

Each level has a time limit for you to trash a set amount of enemy hardware to complete each mission. You're armed with a 20mm Vulcan cannon and a limited supply of missiles. A head-up display shows a radar map of the area, the amount of missiles left and the all important targeting system. Of course the cannon doesn't need aiming (and the ammo is unlimited), so blast away to your heart's content. Missile targeting is thankfully simple, just wait until the two circles in the HUD join and the message Lock On appears and let those suckers fly! Wayhey! Whether or not you like G-Loc really depends whether you're an Afterburner fan or not. Well worth a few ten pees.

PIGSKIN 621 AD

Bally/Midway

● Let me take you back to the Dark Ages. A time when hordes of large hairy men rampaged about killing, pillaging and generally having a good time. But all this rampaging tired them out so they invented a nice quiet sport to help them relax. Pigskin 621 AD is the result: a cross between gridiron football and the movie Rollerball where the only rule is there are no rules. You play the part of the commander of an army of well armed thugs who battle with a similar horde for the possession of an air filled pig bladder!

Both teams will do anything to get the ball and keep a hold on it, and being a vicious band of cut throats there's a team attitude button that allows you to set playing tactics and your team aggression. It's then head to head, knee to groin, boot to face and knife to jugular in a fight to the death! Perhaps this doesn't sound too far removed from gridiron football!

Graphically the game is very good with impressive 3-D panoramic views and Asterix The Gaul cartoon style visuals. Sonics are up to Bally/Midway's usual high standards with suitably medieval tunes and bone snapping effects. American football fans will probably like this more than general gamesplayers though.

ALIEN STORM

Sega

● I'd certainly give Sega credit for coming up with an interesting plotline for Alien Storm. The first part isn't too surprising, a bunch of blood thirsty aliens have attacked the earth and will wipe out mankind if not stopped. The novel approach is that our heroes (there are three of them) are part-time hotdog sellers (weird). Gordon, Karla and Scooter are ready for action in this five level, three player blast-'em-up par excellence — just as soon as they've grabbed the alien splattering guns that are conveniently hidden in the back of their stall.

The opposing aliens aren't your usual thicko rampage-around-and-draw-attention-to-yourself types. Oh no. They disguise themselves as trees, post boxes, phone boxes and the like. Though this doesn't make them any the harder to kill, they do have the element of surprise, and an itchy trigger finger is recommended. You're armed with a powerful bazooka, but if a lamp post (or whatever) suddenly leaps at you and you have no chance to fire, fear not: your fists and feet can be put into action.

The game follows the by now familiar blast anything that moves and kill a big boss at the end of each level formula, until level five where you enter the aliens' spaceship and kill the brain controlling the attacking forces. Alien Storm looks good, plays well and will certainly pull the crowds. Search for it at your local arcade.

Final Lap 2

Namco

● Final Lap 2 is not so much a sequel as an extension of the original game. Like its predecessor the cabinet is distinctive: two screens are placed side by side for those all important two-player games and apparently more than one cabinet can be linked together to give a multi-player game.

There are four tracks to race on, and each is shown in all its tortuous glory. When a track is chosen the game asks for confirmation of a second player (the computer takes over if not), this done it's on with the race. Each player's view is from behind their car and you control the vehicle with the steering wheel, hi-low gear lever, accelerator and brake setup.

As with the majority of racing games these days the higher in the finishing stakes you are the longer you survive. Of course in two-player mode the sight of your friend zooming off up the track adds to the tension, as does the realistic steering. Take a corner too sharply and you'll end up in the crowd! This is one of the only racing games I know of where you MUST brake when approaching a corner and this realism is well appreciated. With so many good racing games around these days your pocket money no doubt disappears at the rate of knots, and now here is another one to gobble up another few ten pees.

MOONWALKER

Sega

● You've seen the movie, you've worn the tee shirt and you've listened to his albums, now play Moonwalker the game! This is a three-player affair where Michael's friends have been kidnapped by a nasty villain and our hip twizzling hero (along with optional friends) must brave level after level of evil henchmen to rescue them.

Each player's Michael wears a different coloured suit so you and your pals aren't confused as to who's who — the bad guys are easy enough to spot. Knife wielding punks, spooks, zombies, robots and gun toting hoods are all after Michael's blood. Michael isn't defenceless: by pressing the shoot button he either spins round and knocks attackers off their feet or fires bolts of lightning from his fingertips. Alternately press the dance button and watch Michael lead all the baddies in an amusing dance routine, at the end of which they all keel over and die!

Along the way Michael finds his friends tied up. When freed they often bestow extra energy (lose all energy and you die) or a dance icon. Watch out for Bubble's the chimp on your travels — catching him turns you into a mean mutha robot that fires twin laser bolts from its hands.

The naff movie may lead you to think that Moonwalker the game is of the same calibre, but it's really rather good. Both graphics and sonics are up to Sega's high standards: colourful and well defined sprites pack the screen whilst many of Michael's hit songs fill your ears. Who's Bad?? This game certainly isn't.

GP Rider

Sega

● Sega are busy little beavers, aren't they? Not content with releasing Alien Storm, Moonwalker, G-Loc et al, they now reveal their new motorcycle racing game. Stunning graphics and realistic bike controls combine to provide the ride of your life. Like Namco's Final Lap 2, two cabinets have been linked to provide simultaneous two-player games, with each player sitting astride a mock motorcycle. So twist that throttle to go and swing the bike from side to side to steer... realistic eh? As you can see from the piccies the graphics are top notch. Check GP Rider out now.

An evil new designer drug called "Nuke" is destroying the remaining fragments of civilised life. Only RoboCop stands in the way of the ruthless drug barons and this time he faces a new enemy ... the incredibly powerful RoboCop 2.

In this major new state of the art interactive telephone game, based on the smash hit movie ROBOCOP 2, YOU become RoboCop. Using Touch Tone (the buttons on your phone), or Voice Recognition (you speak your commands),

Nick's PLAYING TIPS

Ahh... true love is in the air. The little bunnies and lambikins are playing friskily in the meadow and everything is pink and fluffy in the world. Everything except Nick's Playing Tips of course, this section of the mag is WELL 'ARD!

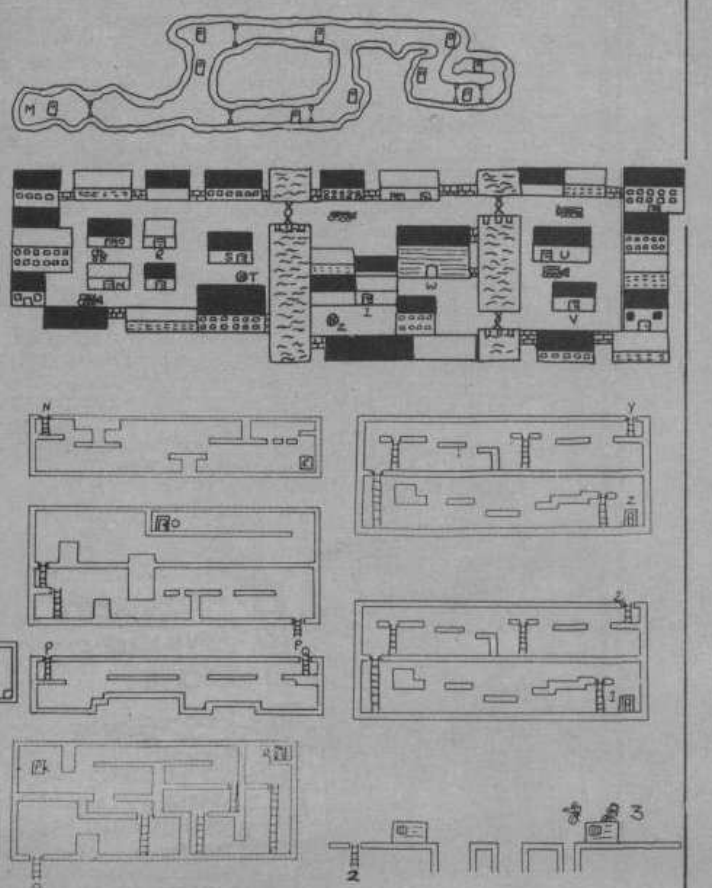

I've got a ton and a half of interesting snippets for you this month. For all fans of the Teenage Mutant Green Splodges who've got fed up with the pencil case, eaten all the candy sticks and worn out the ultra trendy 100% PVC bum bags there's a new mutant map for you to get stuck into. I've also got a jolly fun solution to that spiffing adventure game Five On A Treasure Island on the SAM Coupé and a few yummy hints on CodeMasters' Kwik Snax.

Finally a message to a special person out there as it's almost Valentine's Day... Who's a beautiful wittle snogglechops den? Lots of big, sloppy kissy wissys on the nosey wosey xxx. (Awww! Nick, you're too kind —Ed).

TEENAGE MUTANT HERO TURTLES

TM.

Cowinabunker dudes! This is the totally crucial guide to that greeny game, Teenage Mutant Hero Turtles by none other than me! So it's bound to be really brill isn't it? Playing the game is quite straightforward. All you do is go through each of the sewers killing the nasties and popping down the correct manholes. So I won't print a solution. What I have here is the complete map and a guide to those nasties. There's also a cheat from Timothy Lee of Peterlee (I bet you get teased!).

FIVE ON A TREASURE ISLAND

'Golly gosh, aren't adventures such jolly fun!' Erm, yes, Jeremy Rossall thinks so because he's been working hard on this complete solution and map to that great SAM Coupé game.

pocket money. Find George and give the ices to her. She will now be your friend. Go to the Village Square. Wait until George points to the statue and tells you about her Great Grandfather. When George mentions Timmy, ask her about him. Go to the eastern end of Kirrin Bay Beach. Alf will be pleased to see George. Become George and say hello to Alf. He will then fetch Timmy. Enter the boat. George must row the boat with the oars.

Leave the boat at Kirrin Island and go to the courtyard. Wait until Timmy sees a rabbit and chases it down a hole. Examine the bushes and wear the oven gloves. Pull up the bushes to reveal the entrance to the well shaft. Drop the oven gloves and go down to see a storm brewing. Pull the boat up on to the sand. Eat the cake. Some crumbs will fall to the ground. Take them. When the storm begins go to the long stone room and wait there until the storm is over. You'll start sneezing. Go to the jackdaw tower and drop the crumbs. A jackdaw will eat the crumbs and leave some sticks. Take the sticks back to the long room and paper will fall to the ground. Take the piece of paper and light it with a match. Light the sticks

Cheese and Tomato Pizza Cheat!

Press down the CAPS LOCK, EDIT and GRAPH keys and then press G to turn the cheat on and H to turn it off again. The cheat will give you infinite energy on all the turtles.

with the burning paper. The fire will warm everyone up. Go to the eastern tip of Kirrin Island. Examine the heather to find a tree stump. Tie the rope to the tree stump and drop the rope down the hold to form a way down. Go down into the cave. Julian or Dick must smash open the wooden crate to reveal the axe inside. Take the axe and go west. You'll see an old wreck washed up on the rocks. Board the wreck and go to the Captain's Cabin. Examine the seaweed to find the cupboard. Julian must have the axe. Tell Julian to chop the cupboard with the axe. The lock will shatter. Open the cupboard to find a wooden box inside. Leave the broken cup. Take the wooden box back to Kirrin Cottage (George must row).

Go to Quentin's study and examine the shelves. Read one of the books. Go up to the attic and open the narrow window. Throw the box out of the window. It'll fall down to the crazy paving. Go to the crazy paving. Quentin will enter and take the box into his study. Wait outside until you hear him snoring. Go into the study QUIETLY and examine the desk. Open the drawer to find the wooden box inside. Take the box and open it. A map, key and documents will fall out. Take the map and read it. Leave the box, documents and key. Leave the study. Quentin will enter and take the map from you. Do not enter the study again. Shortly a stranger will arrive to buy the wooden box from Uncle Quentin. Go back to Kirrin Island (George must row).

Fetch the rope from the eastern tip of Kirrin Island, and go to just outside the stone room. Dig with the spade. Timmy will become excited. Tell Timmy to dig. A stone slab will be unearthed. Examine the slab and tie the rope to the iron ring fixed to it. Pull the rope. If everyone is present they'll all join you in pulling the rope and the dungeons will be revealed. Put the batteries in the torch and turn it on. Go to the circular chamber and examine the column. Push the metal grille. It will fall down the well. Go to the wooden door. Julian must have the axe and the torch. Dick should have the matches and candle. Become Julian. Chop the door with the axe. A splinter will fly into Dick's cheek, and he'll go above ground. Go north into the dungeon. The stranger and Jake will enter and lock you in. Become Dick. Wait until you see a motor boat speed away from the island. Go to the entrance of the dungeons and untie and take the rope. The entrance to the dungeons will be blocked off with a heavy boulder. Go down the well and squeeze past the fallen slab. You will be in darkness. Light a match. Tie the rope to the ladder and drop it. It will form a way through the broken grille. You will now be in the circular chamber. Go north, south west, south west (in darkness). Light the candle with a match. You will now be outside the wooden door. Examine the rotten matting to find a hidden key. Take the key and unlock the door with it. Open the door and go north to rescue the others. Take the gold bar. Shortly Julian will have an idea. Go south and south again. Wait there until Timmy points north and growls (quite a time). Wait again until Timmy stops growling. The stranger and Jake are now in the dungeon. Go north. Close and lock the wooden door with the key, trapping the stranger and Jake. Leave the dungeons (the boulder blocking the entrance will have been removed).

SHURIKEN

Everyone I've spoken to loved this Exolon clone on the December cover cassette. In case you found it a little hard, here are some tips on the game from Graham Cormode of Maidstone.

Items appearing on the first two levels

Trees: Two sorts — solid or not. The solid sort must be rocketed. Visual differences are that the solids look more like palm trees and have a grey shaded part on the right hand side.

Crushers: They're impossible to see until they push up, kill you and go down again! They only kill you if you're standing where they appear — so with care they can be avoided.

Homing missiles: Small and annoying, they appear anywhere and home in on you. They kill on contact but can be shot.

Mines: Buried in the ground they explode when you tread on them. They can't be destroyed without loss of life and must be jumped over.

Gun: Sends out bullets like most guns, aimed at you. Try to rocket these as soon as possible even if you lose a life in the attempt. Guns are a right pain!

Mushrooms, tombstones, yellow blocks, flowers and lots of others: Can be rocketed for points but can also be used as steps.

Icons: White squares with designs corresponding to those on the status panel at the top. Increase these things...clockwise from top right: ammo, rockets, lives, teleports (level three onwards).

Anti-grav blocks: Up to three yellow blocks suspended over a central green block in the ground. When you pass the green block the yellow ones start to fall. The yellow blocks are of course deadly if they hit you on the head, so don't linger.

Dynamite: A green square which blows up when shot or rocketed, killing you. Leave them well alone!

Bubble blowers: Minor craters which spew out bubbles which float up and disappear. The bubbles can be shot and the blowers rushed past between blows.

General hints and tips

- ★ Don't be too careful with ammo, you have plenty to use and it is replenished upon death!
- ★ Most things can be destroyed in one go, so don't waste ammo on stubborn items.
- ★ Take out homing missiles and guns as quickly as possible.
- ★ Watch out for mines that blend in and crushers that start after you enter the screen.
- ★ Don't shoot dynamite!
- ★ Don't go off screen leaving something to do (ie. extra life uncollected) as you can't return to a screen once you've left.
- ★ Beat my high score of 12,600 (easy!) and watch out for the falling bombs as seen in 'Cyberoid'.

Screen by screen guide to the first two levels

1. Go as far right as possible, crouch and rocket the tree (the other items may be rocketed for points).
2. Rocket mushroom and the second tree from the left. Jump over the mines.
3. Rocket the flower and tank. Homing missiles appear from now on.
4. Rocket the mushroom and tank.
5. Either jump along the line of gravestones by jumping on the lemon thing then the stone, or just rocket everything!
6. Get extra rockets and rocket everything.
7. Use the mushroom as a shield, walk up to it, jump up and rocket. This should destroy the gun. Then blow up the mushroom.
8. Use the lemons as steps, go up them. Rocket trees and walk off.
9. Blow up the spaceship and walk down the steps. Destroy them and get the extra ammo of necessary.
10. Jump over the mines and the hole, it's that simple.
11. Similar to screen seven, use the face as a shield, rocket the gun then the face and the tree. Go up the steps.

12. Destroy the face, and use its base to mount the tombstones, jump along over the mines.
13. Get onto the middle of the stone and keep jumping along. Rocket the face and walk off.
14. Go a kamikaze — go right, jump right and rocket the gun then you'll die from falling down the hole. Jump the holes in safety without the gun.
15. The second tree is solid, rocket it. Jump over the mine and walk down to the last step and jump over the mine.
16. Similar to screen 14, jump right and destroy the gun and die. Wait for the first crusher to go up then walk along and jump over the first mine. Repeat with the second crusher and mine. End of level one!
17. Level two! Don't blow up the green squares, they're dynamite. Just walk over and avoid the crusher on the right hand side.
18. Rocket the tree, jump the hole, avoid the crusher, blast the door and go through.
19. Destroy the steps and walk along the bottom level collecting the icon on the way.
20. Destroy all the yellow objects and walk along.

21. Avoid the crusher (appears in first third) and blast the door.
22. Jump over bubble blower, walk along (avoiding the falling block) and jump the second blower. Crushers appear, so be quick in the centre.
23. Go right, jump and destroy the gun. Try to land on the extra life and go right before the bubbles start.
24. Jump over the bubbles, get the ammo and go right quickly.
25. Jump onto the first platform, jump up and rocket the gun. Go up the platforms.
26. Use only one rocket for the gun, then jump off the edge and jump over the mines.
27. Just walk right quickly.
28. Repeat 27, then jump on the tank and jump off the far right hand side.
29. Collect icons and fall onto the ground on the right.
30. Destroy the faces and bases. Walk along and blow up the door. Don't stop or you'll be crushed!
31. Walk straight along.
32. Otherwise known as 'aargh'! Jump onto the first block, jump right and rocket the gun. Walk along avoiding the mines. End of level two!

HE IS THE LAW!

(and this is the compo!!)

★ WIN THE COMPLETE SET OF THE CHRONICLES OF JUDGE DREDD!!
 ★ 20 COPIES OF VIRGIN'S JUDGE DREDD GAME UP FOR GRABS TOO!!

Borag thungg Earthlets! Do you want to win some scrotnig prizes? This is the place to win 'em thanks to ghafflebette software house Virgin which is celebrating the long-awaited release of its zarjaz game Judge Dredd!

Judge Dredd was reviewed in issue 81 but because the other computer versions were delayed it's only now that you'll be able to find the future's most feared law enforcer stomping into your shops (Eeek! -The Nation's Shopkeepers).

Star of comic 2000AD, Dredd's on the Specky in style in a six-level shoot-'em-up set on the streets and in the buildings of the meanest town around: Mega City One! Help Dredd stop the army of fatties who are eating through the city! Stop a deadly enzyme that's turning everyone into apes! Defeat Sov agent Orlok before he poisons the water supply turning everyone mad with a dose of the deadly Blockmania drug! And finally call on Dredd's ultimate powers to destroy the snutting evil Dark Judges! The Lawmaster (Dredd's bike) and the lawgiver (Dredd's gun) are there to help and it's a game and half, and it's a very violent other half!! Yayy!

Up for grabs in this florix grabundae Dredd compo is a brilliant first prize: the complete set (so far) of The Judge Dredd Chronicles featuring billions of thrill-packed stories. The prize is a real collector's item — there are around 37 books with a total value of nearly £200!! The first prize winner also gets a copy of the game! Zarjaz!

Even if you don't win first prize Virgin is offering 20 runners-up a Judge Dredd experience with a copy of the game! Quaequam bias, or what?!!

To be in with a chance of winning put your thinking caps on and have a go at this word grid. The nine letters within the grid make up a word, which is found elsewhere on this page. What you have to do is not only spot that one word but then make as many other words from the nine letters as possible. Easy? Nah... there's a catch! You can only move one square at a time. So, to make the word WASTE you start at W, go north-east to A, south to S, north-east to T and south to E. Got the idea? Off you go! If you get 20 words you're doing very well, get 15 and that's good but if you can't make more than ten words don't bother entering!

Having found at least ten words, of three or more letters, write them down, along with your name and address and send the lot to: NEWSFIELD, WHATTA DREDDFUL COMPO!, CRASH, LUDLOW, SHROPSHIRE SY8 1JW. Entries here by February 21 or you'll have the lawmaster to deal with! Splundig vur thrigg, Earthlets!! (You're off your rocker! You're fired! —Ed).

MARK I'm surprised and very pleased to see that the programmer has managed to cram so much into a Speccy game! The graphics are colourful and highly detailed, and the hilarious civil war jingles and tunes complement the action perfectly. As with all two-player games North and South is best played against a mate. This way it's great fun to blast the hell out of one another and still be friends (unless one of you's a bad loser) It's very rare for me to mark a game over 95%, but I love North and South to death (Bang! You're dead -Ed).

Infogrames ■
£12.99 ■ £17.99

Take part in your own American Civil War in this masterpiece of Spectrum programming from Infogrames where comic strip heroes created by Lambil and Cauvin, 'Les Tuniques Bleues' or 'The Blue Jackets' (who they?) come to life.

The objective of the game is simple. Eliminate all the enemy armies across America to ensure victory for your side. You do this by moving your troops around the States, launching surprise attacks on your enemy's forts, hijacking trains and having full scale battles across blood stained fields. There are four main parts to the game, each packed with excellent animated graphics, lots of colour and real toe tapping-tunes.

You start with a map of the USA. The armies are shown by soldiers representing good and bad on each State. The type of flag there shows who it belongs to. Running around the edge of the map is a railway line and on the coast ships sail up and down. If you attack a fort you go into an arcade sequence where the fort scrolls along and you have to dodge the guard dogs, ammo boxes and knives coming from the enemy to reach the flag at the far end. Roles are reversed with you defending if an enemy decides to have a go at you.

Intercepting a train is done in a similar way to the fort. The train runs by and you climb up the side and run along the tops of the carriages, jumping the gaps to make it to the driver. Watch out for those knives again though! Engaging in battle is a funny old game too. The foot soldiers, horse riders and cannon operators are all shown on a large field with bridges and rivers separating the two sides. The first army to be totally destroyed by the other is the winner and that state becomes the prize.

North and South really shows up a lot of other games by being just so slick in presentation and graphics. There are animated sequences as an introduction, and when you win and lose a game, as well as all the excellently drawn and animated arcade sequences. Play is a little puzzling at first but you easily get the hang of it and you can vary the difficulty.

You do this by selecting options at the beginning of a bout. You can choose to have the ships on or off, an important decision, as they bring reinforcements from Europe. You can have Indians on or off to save being attacked and change the weather conditions which stop an army moving.

For those of you who don't like playing arcade sequences all the time there's also an option to stop them: battles are then decided for you by the computer. North and South is not to be missed. If more games were like this there wouldn't be talk of the Spectrum dying. Three cheers for all those involved (hip, hip, hooray!).

GREMLINS 2 THE NEW BATCH

MARK I won't repeat the first words I uttered when I started playing Gremlins 2, suffice to say one of them rhymes with duck. And believe me this game is ducking tough. For many games Billy was swamped by the hordes of nasty little Gremlins that bounce, run and lurk around the screen. The graphics are great, very colourful and fast moving, though sadly it's only the backgrounds that are rainbow-hued: Billy and company are monochrome. If you can survive the initial hair-tearing period Gremlins 2 is a great fun!

dropped water on the chap's head... Four new Gremlins were born: The New Batch! Gremlins 2 — The New Batch is an arcade adventure, steeped in graphical animation and plenty of levels to clear of pointy-eared vermin. There are now separate Gremlin characters looking and sounding a lot like the seven dwarves. Each have a different way of torturing you — from pogging on your head to electrocuting your toes! The weapons you can use against them are mainly torches. Not a very dangerous weapon on humans, but deadly to your average Gremlin! You can also collect tomatoes to throw at them (big deal!), extra lives, bonus points and time addition icons.

Visually, Gremlins 2 is excellent. All the characters are perfectly drawn and animated and the backgrounds are packed with colour and detail. At first I thought the game was impossible to play, it just seemed so hard to get anywhere without being massacred by the little b... blighters. But when you've memorised where they appear from and had a taste of what they do, you can soon get further into it all. I got almost to the end, but then I'm a superstar (hem, hem -Ed)! Gremlins 2 — The New Batch is action packed. It can get very frustrating when you keep getting killed in the same places but that's all part of the fun, isn't it?

Now it's a few years later and little Gizmo has gone back to the old Chinese bloke, Mr Wing. Not for long though: Mr Wing's passed away and the large Camp Plaza has been built where his shop used to stand. "But what happened to poor little Gizmo?" I hear you all shout. He was put in a cage (awww!) and sent to have experiments done on him (boohoo!). That is until a workman accidentally

S.T.U.N. RUNNER

NICK Spectrum games went through a phase of being ultra slick in presentation and graphics around 1987. The programmers seemed to be bettering themselves all the time with great loaders and groovy graphic effects in all their creations. It's logical then to assume that games now should be mindblowing. Unfortunately not. The best of the older programmers have trickled over to the 16-bit computers and we're left with badly put together games like S.T.U.N. Runner. It could easily have been written back in the early days of computing when a black moving across the screen got a CRASH Smash. The tunnel effect where black and white strips shoot out of the screen just destroys your eyesight after one game. I'm seriously thinking of sending Domark my next optician's bill! There is simply nothing interesting to do. You just fly about a bit in your craft, collecting stars and shooting the nasties. A bit of a miss.

the top accolade of the S.T.U.N. racing world.

The Train is harmless but blocks your path, Mag Cycles are small and fast moving, Drones move in packs and intelligently block your path, Armoured Drones are like normal Drones but are indestructible and Flyers drop bombs on your bonce.

Help is at hand. You start the game with lasers and a press of the fire button will atomise all attackers (bar armoured drones). Also by collecting enough of the stars that appear along the route you can stock up with shockwaves (a sort of smart bomb). These stars also indicate the best route to take through the twisting tunnels. Not following the stars slows you down and time is of the essence 'cos each level is played against the clock.

Ideally, you should keep your speed up (as if you needed to be told): to this end watch out for the booster pads as these warp your craft to 900 mph for a short time.

Sounds great, doesn't it? But oh dear, oh dear: S.T.U.N. Runner is decidedly naff. For a start the graphics look as if they've fallen through a timewarp from the early days of the Speccy. The main sprite is OK but, try as I might, I couldn't tell what the hell the attackers were (one actually looks like a mobile dog poo). All I could find to do was to collect objects and blast the indescribable enemy craft. Plus playing this could damage your eyesight! One of the tunnel designs is so eye warping you can literally see moving patterns on your peeper as you look away from the screen. Immense fun in the arcades, but on the Speccy S.T.U.N. Runner does not provide the excitement or thrills to make it a reasonable game.

3-D PINBALL

Mastertronic Plus
■ £2.99 ■ rerelease

Despite the inlay and the software referring to totally different games this is quite a reasonable attempt at pinball. The game on the inlay is called 3-D Pinball and on the tape it's Pinball Power

All the features of a normal pinball table are here. Bonus dials, rollover lanes, bumpers, hairpins, targets and of course the all important flippers have all been included (it's a good job the flippers have or you wouldn't have much fun!).

The board is drawn 3D style, tilted slightly backwards and the ball goes in front of and behind the various obstacles very convincingly. My main moan is that there's only one pinball table to choose from. This severely restricts playability as you very easily get fed up of going through the same motions and hitting the same bonus targets all the while. The main aim in this seems to be to get the biggest score possible, but this just does not excite me. 3-D Pinball is a very basic pinball simulation and lacks lastability.

loopz

Audiogenic Software ■ £10.99
■ £14.99

Strange games that involve selecting shapes and placing them in correct positions seem to be all the rage lately. We've had Pipemania, Pick 'N' Pile, Puzznic and now along comes Loopz.

The thing about most of these games is that they're all based around a similar idea so if you've played one you've played them all really. Loopz is very similar to Pipemania without the rush to get a pipe finished before the water flows.

It contains three different game types. Game A is the most basic. All you have to do is create loopz with the assorted playing pieces provided. The higher the level you play, the more points scored; make more than 25 loopz and an extra life is yours. In Game B you still have to make loopz from the pieces but now you have a target score to aim at. Creating a loop that is equal or above the target gives you access to the bonus game.

Game C is the best of the lot. You're shown a shape on-screen and then pieces are removed from it. You have a limited time to place back all the pieces where they should go. If you get it wrong you lose a life and start again (this gets more like The Krypton Factor all the time!). Thankfully a password system is used so you don't have to play the simple ones over and over.

All the games in Loopz play very slickly with lots of shading on the graphics and music running continuously. Three tunes that can be selected on the main menu screen, or you can turn the music off altogether which is a thankful option as it can grate after a while. Playing is a frustrating affair at first, but when you suss out the menu system and select better options than the default selection you start to have some real fun. Loopz is simple but highly addictive and is enjoyable to play. How long your interest will be sustained is another matter — I don't think I'll be playing this in a month's time.

NICK 70%

MARK Some people may get their kicks from shoving blocks around the computer screen... but sadly my interest in this style of game is wearing thin. Not that this is awful, indeed if you like block puzzle type programs this may be just up your street. The timer adds a certain amount of angst to the proceedings and the graphics, although rather simplistic, do their duty. It's in the playability department that Loopz stumbles, and while it's fun for a while my interest wasn't held for very long.

72%

HAWK STORM

Players Software
■ £2.99 ■

No, this game is not a variation on the 'raining cats and dogs' theme, the Hawk Storm is in fact you! You're a brave warrior of the planet Edos and the only hope your people have of survival.

The planet Edos has only one source of life energy: giant capacitoid crystals that store energy by day and regenerate it during the icy cold nights. The evil Neviks have stolen all but two of these crystals making it impossible to sustain normal life on the planet. All the people but you have gone into a Life Suspension Program — you must succeed in your mission to retrieve the crystals or your whole world will be destroyed!

Hawk Storm looks good with its highly coloured graphics and animated backdrops but don't be fooled by appearances. The game plays like a wet sock. Your character attempts to move across the screen but is stopped by invisible blocks. This makes the game exceedingly annoying. When you realise you can't move normally in the game you adjust the way you play and start to actually get somewhere. Running about carelessly is impossible: you have to save every drop of energy you've got and plan each move before you try to move on. Hawk Storm is really about trial and error. You do something, find out it kills you, and try a different move next time round.

Hawk Storm needs perseverance if you're to get anywhere. You may find the movement annoying but don't give up, there is a game in here somewhere.

Exterminator

Audiogenic ■ £9.99
■ £14.99

It's no easy life being a bug exterminator, but utmost loathing of creepy crawlies should give you the determination to succeed in Audiogenic's latest: seven levels, each one a house, filled with more bugs than you could swing a fly swatter at!

Each house consists of five areas: a bathroom, a basement, a garage, a kitchen, a bedroom and an attic. Your objective is to

NICK Exterminator is one weird game! You play the part of an exterminator (believe it or not!) and have to rid the houses in the game of all their bugs. You do this by either grabbing, shooting or pounding them to death (lovely). To add extra annoyance there are also things you cannot kill easily. Bees come up and sting you if you don't shoo them away, tanks fire at you and you can even get shot by a squirly bottle! The backgrounds used on each of the rooms in the house are excellent, packed full of detail and all in glorious 3D. There are also a few tunes and ditties to listen to. Exterminator is no ordinary shoot-'em-up; prepare to play something a little different. Fast and frantic action all the way!

move from room to room swatting the horrid things that lurk there. An optional two player mode has been included if you feel you need moral support.

Each exterminator takes control of a disembodied hand which can perform several tasks. You can fire a gun, pound the insects to pieces or grab and attempt to squash them. The game is viewed vertically with the current room stretching up the screen, your attackers zooming down at a vast rate of knots. These take on many guises and include wasps, spiders, rats, frogs and mosquitoes.

Along the bottom of the screen is a list of rooms: still unvisited: the idea (apart from killing bugs) is to squash the ground based creatures on one lane of tiles. Each death turns one tile black and when they're all the same colour you move to the room indicated. Erm... it's easier to play than explain.

Energy is lost through contact with the creatures, but juice bottles occasionally appear to top you up; also watch out for the secret warp that takes you to the next house.

Exterminator is based on an arcade coin-op: I've seen it and it looks well weird... very much like the computer conversion. Graphics have been digitised from the arcade parent, and are very detailed. The going is tough. While the first few rooms are fairly easy to clear, by the time you reach the second house the action is fast and furious. Exterminator is a load of fun — even if it is a little strange.

WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP SOCCER

Elite ■ £9.99 ■
£14.99

Elite releasing a football game? Nah, it must be a dream. Hang on! It's true!! World Championship Soccer is here, many moons after the World Cup finished, but what the hell. And, after reviewing six billion footy games in the last few months, I've run out of soccer jokes. So, this is what the game's all about.

Choose from three options at the beginning: World Cup competition (one-player against computer, no team selection), a one-player (against computer and choose your team) or a two-player game. A world map pops up then and from here, using the pointer, you can pick, from 24 countries, which teams you want to play against. Having made a choice you continue by picking individual players for your team.

The individual attributes of each team member are shown: choose eleven desired. Okay — lots of spritey guys running up and down a pitch are never particularly spectacular, but these look like deformed dwarves. Also, the loss of choice to change the game timer is a bad move: the game doesn't actually last for 90 minutes, but at times it seems like it!

MARK 58%

NICK The game takes ages to load. And then there are all the options to wade through! It's a pity that, after all that, the actual soccer sim isn't up to much. Large, awkward moving players jolt about the screen, and scoring goals is dead easy as opposing players don't appear too keen on tackling. What makes World Championship Soccer better than other soccer games about at the moment is its league system. You can work your way to the top in true World Cup style and have full control over the team you play and the players you put in it. The inclusion of a bit of humour in this was an excellent idea. When you make a player kick, his leg gets contorted into some strange positions. Yoga on the football field! World Championship Soccer is another football game to stick on top of the ever increasing pile. Nothing really new to offer at all.

players and hit the pitch. There are six groups of four countries all playing for a place in the final game. Only the top two teams in each group will qualify for the next round, along with four of the remaining third placed teams. Unlike most other football games the time for each match isn't changeable: like real footy matches the game is played for 45 minutes (computer time). You view from above and the player under control is marked by a pointer.

All the usual features such as corner kicks, throw-ins and goal kicks are here, but despite some good options, the graphics leave a lot to be

TURBO KART RACER

Players Software
■ £2.99 ■

Take part in one of the most exciting motor sports known to man! 'Accurate realism!' it yells. Well, what a load of hogwash. Kart racing may be an exciting motor sport in real life but certainly not on the Spectrum.

The game consists of tracks packed full of tight corners and chicanes all drawn in a reasonable way. The cars that zoom around them are all clash free except one, you. As your car is red, whenever you go near the edge of the track or skid off onto the grass you get a large red splodge instead of a kart! It's not as if this were a rare occurrence: the way the kart skids each time you attempt to turn a corner ensures you spend more time off than on the race track, especially if you were using the nitro at the time.

Picking up the icons left lying on each track are helpful if you make it to the next stage of the race: iclocks for extra time, spanners to repair damage and bottles to give you extra nitro power. The slightest touch of another kart and you both explode into tiny pieces. Turbo Kart Racer is a game that I definitely won't be playing again in a hurry.

MIAMI COBRA

Players Software
■ £2.99 ■

The perfect setting: Miami on a hot sunny day. You've got your Mustang Cobra GT and a chick in the passenger seat, what more could you want? You set off on the race of your life, through mountain ranges, inner city landscapes, rolling countryside and tree lined avenues.

Each level is made up of four stages which are displayed on the map at the top left of the screen. The route is packed full of sharp bends so glancing at the map occasionally to give yourself advance warning is essential. The two gears on your Mustang are not enough to get you through the game, that's why you have a turbo boost! But beware, you can only use it eight times on each level.

It's a bit of a shame the graphics in Miami Cobra GT are not better drawn; the game would almost be on par with such racers as Lotus Turbo Esprit. They're not bad though, they just look very 'budget game'. Play is excellent, speeding past all the buildings and zipping around the corners is great fun. Miami Cobra GT is tremendous value for money, even if the logo on the inlay is very Miami Vice!

YOGI BEAR AND FRIENDS IN THE GREED MONSTER

Hi-tec Software
■ £2.99 ■

Yogi's back and he's brought a few friends along with him this time. They've all received a call from Top Cat about how the toys of the world have been stolen and set out to find them. Unfortunately, being dim cartoon characters, they've gone and got captured by the evil Greed Monster! You, as the boisterous bear, now have to find all the toys and rescue your pals from a fate worse than death — the eraser! Oh no! Not the dreaded... (Shut up! — Ed).

The first thing you think when playing this is... Top Cat! The game is basically exactly the same as TC with more of the well drawn and coloured graphics and a variety of nastiness to be avoided. Instead of collecting milk to restore your energy you now munch picnic baskets, and items like keys, sweet jars, honey and cans of pop can all be used to your advantage.

YBAFITGM (for short) is instantly appealing to the younger gamesplayer. The cartoon characters are all recognisable and the simple gameplay is not difficult to master. If you find getting around the aliens in the semi-3D environment a bit hard then fret not! Yogi has been armed with sweets. Firing one at a nasty will soon solve your problem.

Yogi's latest adventure may not be anything new but I found it great fun to play and quite addictive. I recommend it to all our younger readers: the game gets a little repetitive after a while but you'll still have some good fun.

FIRELORD

Players Software
■ £2.99 ■ rerelease

Medieval characters, 500 detailed locations and full colour, cartoon style graphics make up Firelord. The game was originally released in 1986 by Hewson when it got 91% from this very organ. Now on rerelease how will those five years have taken their toll?

Your task is to recover the four charms of eternal youth to give to the evil queen. She has seized the firestone and will only give it back if this small gift is bestowed upon her. You must succeed, brave warrior.

Playing Firelord you can't help but notice the similarities to the older Ultimate games like Atic Atac and Sabre Wulf. The graphics here are a little smaller but the idea of running about a flip screen world dodging nasties and collecting objects is exactly the same. An added feature is the bartering you can do with the townsfolk to get objects and cast spells. The system used in a barter is very confusing if you haven't read the instructions thoroughly — come to think of it they're still confusing when you have! The large play area allows you to explore more and more each time you play, making you come back for go after go. Firelord is a little dated as a full price game but as a rerelease I recommend it to everyone who missed out the first time.

NUMBER ONE IS PUBLISHED BY BBC MAGAZINES

Five levels of road-racing action make up the game and the objective is to stop the head honcho at the end of each section. An APB (All Points Bulletin) is called at the start of each section and, when you know who to hit, hit 'em as hard as you can.

The chase begins in earnest with you putting pedal to metal in search of a Porsche 911. Of course damned annoying civilians are in the way again, but this time you have a surprise up your sleeve (or rather in your holster): a large 9mm automatic pistol. It's easy to poke your head out of the sunroof and blast away at all and sundry in true Sledge Hammer style.

As with Chase HQ a timer awaits. When all the bad guys have been captured it's off to a warehouse to rescue Jennifer. The good news is she's still alive, the bad news is you only have thirty seconds to get to her before the warehouse goes BOOM!!!

I loved the original Chase HQ in the arcades, but when SCI appeared it seemed to be little more than a continuation of Chase. All that really changed was Ray's ability to shoot the villains rather than ram them, and to me half the fun was in smashing the bumper off the crook's car. All I have to say about SCI is nice graphics, but gameplay does not go way beyond Chase.

MARK 75%

NICK It's a bit of a tradition with sequels for them to be disappointing. Chase HQ 2 obviously didn't want to break that tradition because it's sadly not much cop. The game isn't all that bad, it's simply too similar to the original in looks and gameplay. You jump into the seat of your flashy car, drive speedily along, then bash into a criminal's car over and over until he surrenders. This you have to repeat time after time until the end of the game. The only noticeable difference between this and Chase is that you're now armed with a gun to take pot shots at your target as well as bashing them. Still, Chase HQ 2 is a great game if you don't have the original.

ticks down, so hit the turbo button as often as possible (though the charges are limited). When the target vehicle is in sight a large arrow appears over it and the blasting fun can commence. A damage meter appears to the left of the screen. This time, instead of ramming the crook's car with your front bumper to nab him, your gun will have to do the job.

As damage increases so does the height of the meter until his car is full of lead and you're moved to the next APB where another chase
